29, chiropractor

WE LOVE... his healing hands

Since 2009, Gary has volunteered at children's homes and orphanages in Cambodia and Malaysia. Last year, he became the talk of a small town in Cambodia while helping out at a home for children with special needs. "There was a little girl who wouldn't stop crying and no one knew why. I gently did some chiropractic moves on her which I knew could improve her mood, and she was an angel the next day," shares the Malaysia-born who grew up in Australia. The day after, he visited a rural hospital and spent nine hours tending to the villagers' body aches. Word of his healing touch spread and the compound was jam-packed with people the next day. "I treated a guy who came with 10 friends. They were willing to wait about eight hours to see me," says the singleton. Thankfully, the queue at his Orchard Road clinic, Chiroworks Family & Sports Clinic, is not quite so long.
